Cycle News.

The world—judged by Rhinelander—is going crazy on the subject of wheels. There is scarcely a man in town who can afford it who either hasn't bought a wheel or has one in his head on the subject. One of the "fans" has gone so far that he has furnished us with a number of cycle items, and asked that they be published. From the nineteen pages of pointers and pleasantries we learn that

There are about fifty safeties owned in town and orders in for nearly a score more.

The first regular run of the Rhinelander club was held Sunday morning. About twenty mounted their safeties and took a spin out beyond the Catholic cemetery, and from there to the Lake creek bridge.

The best wheel in town is owned by Sam Hutchinson. It is a Columbia, and while Hutch has not appeared in any of the runs or races publicly, his neighbors report that he has had several interesting arguments with it in the back yard.

The best rider in the city is Hurley Woodward, clerk in the Merchants' State Bank. While his machine is an old one, he does less damage to the fences along the route than any of the crowd.

The threatened ordinance with regard to keeping wheels off the sidewalk has had the effect of keeping them in the road on business streets.

The best lady rider in the city is Miss Deleahanty, book-keeper for the Hammond-Standish Co. Her reputation as a cyclist is in danger, however, as there are a number of beginners who promise to develop into experts before another month is gone.

Dr. Kiehl has a new machine of the finest pattern. Now that he has knocked down what hydrants and stumps were in his course he expects to keep this new one in tolerably good repair.

Charlie Nelson and Doctor Keith are the first to don bicycle uniforms. It is expected that as soon as the club is regularly organized they will adopt some uniform.

Paul Browne, who used to travel twenty-five and thirty miles daily while in Mississippi this winter, is trying to keep up his record here, but the roads won't have it.

Will Harrigan is out with a challenge to any local rider for a race of any distance from a rod to a mile, at catch weights.

Doctor Daniels is one of the latest victims. He reasoned with somebody's machine, the whole length of Oneida Avenue one night last week.

A meeting of all bicycle riders of the city is called for Friday evening at Dr. Kiehl's office, when the formation of a club will be effected. The membership on the start is expected to be about forty.

E. O. Brown has bought a couple of Columbias for himself and wife.

Charlie Woodcock's new machine with the proprietor astride, jumped the track near the Baptist church Monday in a manner that nearly finished both.

Ed. Squier will bring a new Columbia home from Chicago with him.

The plans for bicycle races on the new fair grounds are already being contemplated by some of the "scorekeepers."

Will Fenelon has said to have traded his interest in a wheel for property near Alaska. Incompatibility of temper on the part of both is given as the reason for the divorce.

Harry Ashton and wife have a couple of new machines.

Lute Wheeler, of the First National Bank, has secured a Cleveland. We agree with Barnum when he said in referring to the craze in Wausau that these bank collection clerks didn't need any bicycles. They got around plenty fast enough without any aid.

Chippewa Falls, Wausau, Marshfield and Merrill have given royal receptions to the Normal school regents who have recently visited those places. Special trains, banquets, speeches, and a general celebration has characterized their reception in each of the above named places. When the regents come here they will not be treated to such a lavish display of hunting or band music as they are used to, but they will be shown the best site in Northern Wisconsin for a Normal school.

The Merchants' State Bank will remodel their bank building on Brown street, putting in a new front, new fixtures, etc. It will considerably improve the appearance of the exterior and will also give the bank an appearance which its importance justifies.

The Fair Grounds Question.

The county board decided Tuesday evening that the fair grounds, on which $5,500 of county money and $1,000 of popular subscriptions has been spent, shall be left as it is. While the county board may justify their action by the fact that the grounds have cost more than was expected and are not yet done, it seems as though it was poor business policy to say that inasmuch as the selection of site was poor, that they will allow the money already spent to remain a monument of folly and the laughing stock of everyone who knows anything of the affair. For the sum of $2,200 the track can be completed, in good shape. The people of Rhinelander are of course anxious that it shall be done. But they are not the only beneficiaries nor are they wholly to blame for the track's present condition. An agricultural society in Oneida county will some day—and within a much shorter time than many imagine—be a benefit to the county that will be of interest to the infant farming industry—Which this country can afford to—and ought to encourage. At present there are over seventy-five actual farmers in this county who are clearing from five to ten acres every year. If the selection of a site for the fair grounds was good or was bad has nothing to do with the question now. The only question at issue is, whether or not it is good sense to allow the track and land which has cost over six thousand dollars, to be abandoned when $2,200 will complete it. The people of Rhinelander have given liberally toward that track and were the county board to finish it, there is no question but what there could be more raised to put up proper buildings and complete the grounds. To leave it as it is certainly looks like the height of folly. If it was to cost an unreasonable sum to finish it, that would be another matter. For the sum of $2,200, for which amount it will be guaranteed by a responsible contractor, it can be made something which will—if it has been expensive—not be a standing advertisement of the county board's judgment. The people of this town would have to pay a large majority of the appropriation, and with this sentiment here in favor of it, it surely looks like poor business policy to do nothing.

Benefit for the Catholic Church.

A benefit for the Catholic church of Rhinelander will be tendered Saturday evening, May 27, at the Grand Opera House. Mr. Leigh Morrison, of Boston, has been negotiating for several days with the ladies' committee of Father July's church, who have decided to produce "The Woven Web" a drama of the late war, under Mr. Morrison's direction, assisted by the best local talent of Rhinelander. The drama is in four acts and embraces several thrilling and pathetic scenes, while a delightful vein of comedy runs all through the piece.

CAST:

Walter Hastings (a young attorney).....Mr. Francis Goshy
Joseph Harrington (who weaves the web).....David Jenkinson
Harry Falconer (a young Virginian).....Frank Hallett
Uncle Toby (of vast ideas).....Leigh Morrison
Mr. Parkhurst (a leading lawyer).....C. J. Brown
Miss Hild (his protegee).....Arthur Jenkinson
Jones (slightly tanned).....F. J. Brown
Bertha Danvers (an orphan).....Miss Julia Kern
Louise Falconer.....Miss Myrtle Chaffee
Aunt Judy.....Mrs. Lucy Perry

The county board were in session two days, and transacted the customary amount of business for the first meeting. The Hazelhurst-Rhinelander road is to be improved to make it in good shape; the fair grounds are to remain in the present condition—for the present at least. The question of board of prisoners at the county jail was taken up and the compensation allowed the sheriff raised from $3.50 to $4.50 per week. Pat Brennan was appointed purchasing agent for the ensuing year. The New North was designated as the official county paper and authorized to publish all proceedings, etc. The usual grist of bills was disposed of.

Somemiscrant burned a cope in the Eagle River Catholic church last week, and left a note of warning to Father July on the steps, informing him that if the church didn't have the body of Ben—whoever he was—buried in the Catholic cemetery, that he would reduce the whole structure to ashes. Father July knows nothing of the identity of Ben, and will of course pay no attention to the threat. It was probably the work of some crank.

Elmer Danfield has the plans ready for a new house on his lots on Pelham street. Work will be begun at once.

You can get anything but credit at Langdon's.

Mrs. Ed. Berry is visiting friends at Stevens Point.

John Binder is selling out his jewelry stock at Prentice.

"Sidetracked" will soon appear at the Grand Opera House.

Perry Clark and Will Ogden were out for a fishing trip last week.

WANTED.—Men to cut cord wood. ALEX. McRAE.

Architect J. E. Clancy, of Iron Mountain, was in the city yesterday.

A good carriage horse can be bought cheap. Inquire of Martin & Co.

D. L. Jenkinson is looking after E. G. Squier's store during the latter's absence.

Smith—the shirt Smith, of Wausau—has been here delivering goods for a week past.

Ed. Berry will build a new house on Oneida Avenue, similar to W. H. Brown's.

Tom Curran returned Tuesday from his studies at Delafield, for the summer vacation.

E. G. Squier and wife left for a two weeks' visit to the World's Fair city, Sunday evening.

J. E. Jackson, the plumber, will probably put in the new waterworks system at Tomahawk.

John Woodcock was in town Tuesday, and so far as heard from didn't offer to whip a single man.

County Treasurer T. H. Walsh, of Eagle River, was here Monday on business. He reports this town as decidedly boomy.

Bronson Strain, of Battle Lake, Minn., was in town Monday visiting relatives, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Ogden.

Pellus Bertrand has a good heavy horse, single wagon, and harness for sale cheap. He will dispose of it at a bargain.

The base ball season is showing greater crowds than ever in the cities. The craze, far from being dead, is on the increase.

J. E. Jackson, the plumber, has rented the Shepard residence on Pelham street and is moving his household goods into it.

A. O. Jenne, the new chairman of the new town of Woodboro, was here Monday to attend the first county board meeting.

Oranges have never been so cheap as at present. Langdon is selling them at remarkably low prices—but for cash every time.

Frank Rogers and Thos. Loughlin, of Minocqua, were in the city this morning on their way to Eagle River to attend a county board meeting.

John Reardon, Harry Ashton and Calvin Chaffee formed a fishing party Friday that captured a good sized string up near Pine lake.

Someone took the wrong valise out of the Lake Shore depot belonging to Art. McCloud, of Eagle River. The party who took it will please send it to him.

Will Carr wants the new pair of shoes which were taken from the town clerk's office brought back. The joke was good but it has gone far enough.

A visitor to the World's Fair, who wishes to "see the show" can take a look at the various side shows within the show for a trifle of something like thirty dollars. The air is free.

The logs are running well in the Wisconsin river this spring. The boom company has a full crew of men at work and are dividing as fast as they come down.

Real estate transfers are numerous in the city. Register of Deeds O'Connor is kept busy in his office, and the work has steadily increased since he came in possession of it.

Mrs. Henry Meyn died Wednesday morning, after a brief illness. A little child was born to them last month, and is left motherless. The remains were taken to Shawano county for interment.

The Baebenroth Music Co. have sold five pianos and organs in this city within the past two weeks, which speaks well for both the town's musical taste and Manager Brown's hustling ability. The fact that first-class instruments can be bought on remarkably easy terms is an inducement which lends many to buy.

Among the coming attractions at the Grand Opera House in the near future will be "The Chicks," given by as clever a company as can be brought together. Their date has not been set yet, but will probably be about the 30th.

An ordinance has been introduced in the council of Oshkosh prohibiting bicycle riding on any sidewalks in the city. The wheels were so thick and the riders so fresh that it was hardly safe to attempt a trip on foot anywhere in the city.

Fletcher & Bellamy, the builders, have a number of jobs on hand and are rushing their work in every direction. They are ready to turn out satisfactory jobs on the shortest possible notice and keep a large crew of men at work all the time.

Joe Busha and Henry Amd were arrested Tuesday by Constable Geo. Didier for selling liquor in the town of Woodboro without a license. They were brought before Municipal Judge Browne, where they pleaded guilty and paid fines and costs amounting to $67.00.

A party of Rhinelander people will leave for Chicago to take in the World's Fair next week. Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Reardon, Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Miller, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Shelton, Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Daniels, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Bronson and Mr. and Mrs. B. R. Lewis will constitute the party.

H. G. Hunter, of the James S. Kirk Company, has the foundation up for a fine new house near the box factory. Every new home in the town is worth fifty transient people, and another cause for congratulation is that we want such men as Hunter to become identified with the place.

County Treasurer Holland began the annual sale of delinquent taxes Monday. The bidders are about the same as last season. Miss Kate Pier and Thos. Spence, of Milwaukee, are buying a number of certificates in order to protect others purchased in previous years. The sale will likely last several days.

Conro's mill had quite an accident Saturday. The piston rod of the steam feed broke, breaking out the cylinder head, and passing clear through the mill. Fortunately no one was injured although the flying iron passed dangerously near several men outside the mill. The accident is a costly one, and necessitates several days' shut down.

The county board met Monday evening for the first time, and re-elected Cy. C. Yawkey chairman. Mr. Yawkey is a man who fills the position admirably and whose experience in county government matters makes him valuable in the place. If there is any honor in the position his friends throughout the county will be glad that it was conferred upon him.

The Ashland Daily Press World's Fair Annual is the most pretentious and perhaps the best that any paper in the state ever issued. It contains 184 pages of descriptive matter and illustrations, without an advertisement to mar its beauty or effectiveness. Joe M. Chappie, the enterprising publisher, is entitled to a credit mark longer than the Prentice monopoly.

Mahara's original colored minstrels packed the Grand Opera House to the doors Monday night. Their show is the same old thing and hardly met expectations. The coons are not in the race with white men when it comes to playing "nigger" and the old jokes they hand out to an audience are deserving of a rest. Mahara always makes money in the show business, but his audiences always suffer in consequence.

Olson for years has been a hard drinker and has been in jail for threatening the life of his wife, she having separated from him. On Sunday night Mrs. Olson and her sister, Celia Peterson, were on their way home from church, when they met Olson. He had been drinking and told his wife to come to him, as he wished to talk to her. She refused, and Olson pulled a revolver and fired two shots, neither of which took effect. Miss Peterson, to save the life of her sister, stepped between them. Olson fired at her, the shot entering her head and killing her at once. When Olson was captured he was found to be fatally wounded by a shot back of the ear.

TEN timber men were killed in the copper mine at Houghton, Mich., the 14th by the falling of a cage to the bottom of the shaft.

GATES TO BE OPEN.

Sunday Opening. After May 21. Decided Upon by World's Fair Directors.—The Main Buildings of the Exposition to be Closed—Visitors, However, Upon Payment of Twenty-five Cents May Perambulate Through the Park and Find Entrance to Midway Plaisance and Its Attractions, Foreign Buildings and Most of the State Buildings.

CHICAGO, May 13.—Members of the local world's fair directory passed a resolution Friday that the world's fair should be open Sundays on and after May 21. They took this action upon the recommendation of Director Edwin Walker, the leading legal adviser of the board. After many hours of thought Mr. Walker, in consultation with Lyman J. Gage, Henry H. Stone and others, came to the conclusion that congress had no authority over anything other than the exhibits, and that the directory was free to act in accordance with the terms of the resolution which Mr. Walker presented. His resolution does not propose to open the exhibit buildings, the great structures in which the products of all countries are housed, but merely the grounds about them—the Plaisance and the state and foreign buildings—providing those in control of them so elect.

Inasmuch as the big exhibit buildings may not be entered by the visitors the directory proposes that a charge of but twenty-five cents be made to enter the grounds Sundays. The action of the directory was taken in accordance with what is believed to be public sentiment. Members of the national world's fair commission are disposed to resent the assumed right of the local board to open the gates, even if the exhibit buildings remain closed. Most of those who were seen declared that the directory could not, without the sanction of the commission, put such a resolution into operation; and they have previously threatened that legal proceedings would be instituted if their concurrence was not secured before Sunday opening in any form were attempted.

The resolution creates a new regulation differing from the Sunday closing one adopted by both bodies. The commission will be in session to-day and some action may be taken by it. Inasmuch, however, as there is no probability of a quorum being present, it will be unable either to authoritatively approve or reject the new rule. But there is little reason to doubt that, unless explanations accompany the resolutions, there will be some bitter talk at today's session of the commission.

The meeting of the board of directors Friday afternoon was one of the largest yet held. The only subject discussed was that of Sunday opening, and the session lasted several hours. When the final vote was reached it was found that the sentiment for an open Sunday at Jackson park was really stronger than at first supposed. The special committee on legislation, composed of Edwin Walker, Ferdinand W. Peck, F. S. Winston and Arthur Dixon, made its report, and after a full discussion of the question Edwin Walker introduced the resolutions, which were passed by a vote of 27 to 7. The resolutions are as follows:

"Resolved, That in accordance with the opinion of Edwin Walker, chairman of the committee on legislation of this corporation, submitted herewith, the public be admitted to the grounds surrounding the exposition buildings, the buildings containing exhibits remaining closed upon Sundays, and that the price of admission on such days be fixed at twenty-five cents.

"Resolved, That this resolution take effect from and after May 21, 1893.

As a finale to the day's work the board, by a resolution, made Edwin Walker solicitor general for the exposition.

The report of the committee on legislation, by its chairman, Edwin Walker, defines the powers of the exposition on the Sunday closing question. Mr. Walker holds that the acts of congress refer to the buildings, and not to the fair grounds, which are not an exhibit. The grounds unoccupied by the buildings have been beautified and ornamented for the use of the public, but they have no special relation to the exhibit, nor are they a part of the exposition. Mr. Walker does not believe that the prohibition of congress can be extended to the public park and grounds. Again the committee does not believe it was the intention of congress to prohibit the representatives of foreign nations and the commissioners of states from visiting their buildings and temporary homes Sunday. Therefore the opinion of the committee is that the act of congress of August 5 only requires that all the main buildings containing exhibits installed for exhibition shall be closed to the public Sunday and that the admission of the public to the grounds and the buildings not devoted to exhibition purposes would not be in violation of the letter or spirit of the law. On this opinion the board of directors passed the resolution which opens every part of the world's fair grounds to the public Sundays with the exception of those buildings wherein are placed exhibits.

This really leaves but a small part of the fair still under the Sunday closure rule. The Midway Plaisance, with its scores of attractions, all the foreign buildings, all the state buildings, all the concessions of different kinds and the other beautiful buildings of the White City where exhibits are not made will be thrown open. Then there will be the great structures, with an act of congress barring their doors. The same act will not cover the buildings externally, so there will be beautiful sights, and all the show will be opened for twenty-five cents.

Forest Fire in New Jersey.

TOMS RIVER, N. J., May 13.—Forest fires have covered all the eastern end of Berkeley township for the last three days, burning hundreds of acres of oak, pine and cedar timber, many valuable cranberry bogs and three houses. The fire is supposed to have started from a New Jersey Central railroad engine Tuesday.

Damages for the Loss of a Hand.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., May 13.—Frank O'Brien, a section hand living here, has been awarded damages of $1,500 against the Chicago & Alton railway for the loss of a hand in a collision.

HOLDS ITS OWN.

General Business in Good, Despite an Extraordinary Number of Heavy Failures.—Many Firms Short of Funds.

NEW YORK, May 13.—R. G. Dunn & Co.'s weekly review of trade says: "The market in the industrial states a week ago, the failure of some firms and of the National Cordage company and the largest decline in stocks known in any week since 1873, have been followed by surprisingly little disturbance. Business has shown remarkable soundness and strength under such a strain. Bank failures at Chicago and Indianapolis and rumors of others reflect large losses through Chicago specialties in real estate and grain, and at Indianapolis through the failure of the Premier Steel company, but commercial credits are not as yet materially affected. Interior money markets are growing tighter and more cautious, but no such stringency is yet seen as to check general trade, which appears to have improved.

"While the failures in the United States and Canada for the week were 230 in number, against 175 last year, and in the United States alone 275 against 150, there were only eleven with ratings over $100,000. From $500,000 to $1,000,000 there were 100,000 to $500,000 only two, one from $500,000 to $1,000,000 and two with ratings over $1,000,000. Considering the extraordinary pressure in stock and money markets the report indicates greater soundness than could have been expected."

OTTAWA, Ill., May 13.—R. J. Hornick, of Grand Ridge, 6 miles south of this place, made an assignment Friday, his liabilities being estimated at about $300,000. Hornick conducted a general store and private bank, and many farmers with $500 to $5,000 idle money had it on deposit drawing interest, as Hornick paid 4 per cent. on time deposits. The failure is the result of investments in Sioux City and the recent heavy failure in that city. Scores of farmers are ruined.

MILWAUKEE, May 13.—The largest failure recorded in this city for a number of years occurred here Friday. The firm to go under is that of Frank Lappen & Co., dealers in house furnishings and furniture. The claims filed up to Friday evening amount to $273,730.51. This is by no means the full extent of claims outstanding, and a great many Milwaukee people are said to be involved. Just how far-reaching will be the results of the failure is unknown.

At a meeting of business men Friday night, consisting of attaching and non-attaching creditors, it was decided to allow Lappen & Co. to resume business to-day. The assets of the firm are placed by Mr. Lappen at $580,000, and the liabilities $380,000.

WILMINGTON, Del., May 13.—With regard to the failure of the banking house of R. R. Robinson & Co. of this city, with liabilities of $326,000, it is said to have been caused by the decline in Reading and the fact that the firm had been carrying a number of customers on margin, who had given no security. Mr. Robinson had also indorsed heavily for different persons. It is said that the firm could have pulled through had not Mr. Robinson been on a jury at the time of the Reading collapse or had he been permitted to consult with his son in regard to a deal, which might have tided the concern over.

In the bank was a large sum, by some placed as high as $70,000, deposited by Stansbury Willey, mayor of the city, who is supreme master of the exchequer of the Knights of Pythias. Mayor Willey admits that he had large sums of money on deposit in the bank, but that it is amply secured by collateral.

St. Louis, May 13.—In the circuit court at Bellefonte Friday afternoon the Belleville Steel company confessed judgment in the sum of $3,371 in favor of Fielding W. Oliver, of St. Louis.

The cause is given as "the financial flurry and the difficulty of negotiating paper of any kind." The assets are placed at $490,000; liabilities, about $500,000, scattered in Ohio, Pennsylvania, Missouri and Illinois.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 13.—The firm of W. H. Thomas & Son, the largest dealers in old Kentucky whisky in the world, suspended payment Friday morning, the result of the dullness of the whisky trade and tight money market. The liabilities are considerably over half a million, but the assets exceed this sum by nearly one-half.

A TRAIN HELD UP.

Masked Robbers at Work on the Mobile & Ohio Road.—They Use Dynamite to Force an Entrance into the Express Car and Secure About $1,000.

St. Louis, May 13.—Passenger train No. 6, north bound, on the Mobile & Ohio railroad, due here at 7 a. m., was held up by four train robbers near Laketon, 13 miles south of Cairo, Ill., at 10 o'clock Thursday night. The train consisted of two sleeping cars, one day coach, baggage car and southern express car. The express car was in charge of Messenger S. H. Ray and a helper named Pearson. When the train stopped at the water tank 1 mile south of Laketon the robbers covered the engineer and fireman with revolvers and compelled them to get off the engine and go with them to the express car. The express messengers refused to open the door and began hiding the contents of the safe and other valuables. The robbers threatened to use dynamite unless the doors were opened, and on a second refusal being given the robbers exploded a cartridge of dynamite at the side of the car, blowing a hole in it. One of the robbers then put a huge revolver through the opening and said he would shoot unless the doors were opened. Upon being promised that they would not be hurt the messengers unlocked the door, and the robbers came in and secured everything in the safe. They secured about $1,000. The robbers escaped to the timber and did not molest the passengers.

Herolems of a Girl.

CHICAGO, May 13.—Jesse Spaulding was fatally burned Friday night at 9015 Houston avenue. Her brother, 2 years old, while playing with an oil stove ignited his clothing and set fire to his baby brother. The girl, who is 17 years old, smothered the flames with her skirts and saved the children, but was so seriously burned that her life is despaired of.

CLEVELAND, May 13.—The state convention of the prohibition party will be held in Music hall, this city, Tuesday and Wednesday, June 27 and 28.

WISCONSIN STATE NEWS.

MRS. RUSSELL DISCHARGED.

Judge Bailey Releases the Convicted Murderer of Bertha Erickson.

Judge Bailey discharged Mrs. Russell who was convicted in Eau Claire a year ago of the murder of Bertha Erickson by poison. He discharged her on two grounds—first, that she had been once placed in jeopardy and had done nothing to waive her right to plead against a second jeopardy; and, second, that the district attorney, by using a detective to obtain knowledge of her defense in advance by means of a telephone stratagem, had deprived her of a constitutional trial and so trampled upon her rights that an irreparable injury had been done and she could not have a constitutional trial at all. Judge Bailey also said that even if she were again convicted he would not permit such a verdict to stand unless there is stronger evidence than there was on the first trial. Mrs. Russell showed no emotion at all. It is said the case has cost her heavily.

A Prominent German Dead.

Christian Reuter, agent of the German Immigration Aid society in Milwaukee and one of the best known Germans in that city, died from the effects of a stroke of paralysis, aged 70 years. Mr. Reuter was connected with the immigration work for nine years and through his exertions many immigrants from the old country were able to find employment and comfortable homes as soon as they landed in Milwaukee. He leaves a wife and several grown up children.

A Thirty-Year Sentence.

William Dukelow, accused of assault on the 4-year-old daughter of John McSheffery, pleaded guilty in the circuit court at Eau Claire and was sentenced to thirty years in the penitentiary. Five days in each year to be spent in solitary confinement. Dukelow's wife claims that her husband is usually unsound from an accident that happened to him a few years ago.

Five Men Hurt.

The immense sheds of the Northwestern Fuel company in Milwaukee collapsed without warning, burying about twenty men. The sheds were of wood and covered an area 300 by 25 feet. No cause could be ascribed for their collapse. They probably gave way under their own weight. Nobody was killed outright, but five men were badly injured and some may die.

Medical Society Officers.

The State Medical society in session in Milwaukee elected the following officers: President, Dr. B. C. Brett, Green Bay; vice presidents, Dr. H. M. Brown, Milwaukee, and Dr. Hugo Philner, Waukesha; secretary, Dr. Charles S. Sheldon, Madison; treasurer, Dr. S. J. Hall, Ripon. Dr. L. G. Armstrong, of Joscobell, was elected to succeed himself as one of the censors of the society.

Rescued from a Wreck.

The Milwaukee life-saving crew rescued Capt. James Holben and the crew of the tramp schooner Thomas C. Wilson, which was disabled by the storm off North point, 6 miles from Milwaukee. If hard work at the pumps the life savers kept the Wilson afloat and brought her into port. The schooner's stern was broken in by the waves.

S. G. TUTTLE, Supervisor.
The following ordinance was read and on motion adopted: An ordinance relating to the obstruction of streets at railway crossings.
The town board of Pelican exercising the powers of a village board within the limits of the unincorporated village of Rhinelander, do ordain as follows: It shall be unlawful for any person or persons, railroad company or corporation to obstruct any of the streets in the village of Rhinelander by placing, leaving or allowing to remain on any such street, any locomotive or railroad car; and no railroad company nor any employee of any railroad company shall stop any train, locomotive or car on the crossing of any public highway in the village of Rhinelander so as to block or prevent travel on any such highway for more than five minutes at any one time. Any person or corporation violating any provision of this ordinance shall be liable to pay a penalty of not less than five nor more than fifty dollars. This ordinance shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage and publication.

The following resolution was read and on motion adopted: The board of supervisors of the town of Pelican exercising the powers of a village and within the limits of the unincorporated village of Rhinelander in said town do ordain as follows:
Whereas said board deem it necessary to cause to be constructed sewers and drains in accordance with the plans as heretofore adopted for such village as follows:
Upon Davenport street the entire length of said street; upon Brown street from King to Rives street, and upon Stevens street from King street to Rives street. Now, therefore, Saturday May 20, 1893 at 7 P. M. at the office of the town clerk of Pelican is hereby appointed as the time and place, where and when all persons interested may appear before said board and be heard in said matter.
This ordinance shall be published in the Vindicator, a weekly newspaper published in said village on the tenth day of May, 1893.

Moved and seconded that the bid of J. A. Germond to build the road in Section 23, Town 36, north of range 9
E. as advertised for $85.00 be accepted. Motion prevailed.
Committee appointed to investigate the petition of M. McKee and others reported as follows. In regard to said petition I recommend as follows:
That one electric are light be placed at the corner of Dahl street and Baird Avenue, and that the water main be extended from Oncida Ave.
along Dahl street East to Eastern Ave. with one hydrant at the corner of Dahl street and Baird Ave. and one at the corner of Dahl street and Eastern Ave.
S. G. TUTTLE.

section 25, said town.

We, the undersigned supervisors of said town, did on the 22d day of April 1893, make out a notice and fix therein a time and place at which we would meet and decide upon such application, and did meet on the 9th day of May, 1893, at seven o'clock P.
M. of said day at the office of the town clerk of Pelican, it being the time and place fixed by us in said notice, and having first been satisfied by due proof, that the notice aforesaid had been duly given five days before the date of our said meeting, to all the occupants of the lands through which said highway may pass, by serving each of them personally with said notice, and that said notice had also been posted up in three public places in said town ten days before the time of said meeting in the manner required by law, we did then and there proceed to examine personally said highway and did hear any and all reasons that were offered for and against the laying out of the same and did decide upon said application. And it being our opinion that the public good will thereby be promoted, did decide to lay out said highway as described in said application and as hereinbefore described.
Now, therefore, pursuant to said application, we, the said supervisors, do hereby order and determine that a highway be and the same is hereby laid out in said town upon the line specified in said application and hereof described in this order, the same being an accurate survey of said highway caused by us to be made. The line of said survey is the center of said highway and the same is of the width of four rods.

Groceries Cheap—But for Cash.
M. Langdon is now selling groceries at a closer margin than any merchant in town. There are some good reasons why he can do this. One is that he sells for cash only and thereby makes none of his customers who pay their bills also pay for those who don't. Another reason is that he buys as cheaply as anyone and by selling for cash can afford to make a smaller margin.

THE OUTDOORS GIRL.

The bells of the ballroom capitulate.
The youths who cluster round
Frisk and fair and pale she,
Too dainty to touch the ground.
She'll dance for hours without a rest
In the ballroom's dizzy whirl,
But she's far too fragile and fair for me.
Hurrah for the Outdoors Girl!

Her skin is browned and the blood shows
Through
In a healthy, glowing flush.
She doesn't care for the pale lights
Of the brilliant ballroom's crush.
She loves the fields, the flowers, the woods,
And the joyous songs of birds.
To her the joy of living seems
A pleasure too deep for words.

She fences, rides on horse or wheel,
Plays tennis and walks and drives.
She lives as much in the world as the belle
Of the ball in a dozen lives.
Her head doesn't ache in the afternoon,
And her appetite never fails.
She's bright and cheery and full of life,
And a stranger to aches and ills.

She's plump and rosy and sweet and round,
A picture of perfect health.
She boasts a fragrant odor from her pores
That is better far than wealth.
Her eyes are clear and her skin is fair,
Though her cheeks do get out of curl,
And she is the hope of the world to-day.
Hurrah for the Outdoors Girl!

IN LATER YEARS.

Ethel Harcourt's Story and the Reward It Brought.

Ethel Harcourt sat on a sunny south veranda, idly looking out on a typical southern California landscape in early spring. The Chumacera was still white with the lately fallen snow, and rugged El Cajon showed to advantage in the foreground. The lower slopes and the valleys were green, occasional patches of yellow showing where the violet, now past its prime, or the poppy, in all its richness, found a congenial home.

Miss Harcourt listened to the wild song of the birds, and underneath the gay melody there ran a minor strain, like some half forgotten song which is recalled by an old association.

Her mind glanced swiftly over the last ten years in her California home. Her mother's illness and death, her father's loss, not only of wife, but of fortune. Their retirement to this lonely ranch among the hills. "Yes," she said to herself, "the gay, unreflecting girlhood in New England seemed like something in another age. Not a feeling, not a hope, not a desire in common with that young creature." She thought with a smile, as one might think of another, that in those years she was fair to look upon. The clear, bright eyes, the softly rounded cheeks, the mass of rebellious hair which tangled and curled in spite of her plait. Why did those years, especially those months spent at the Atlantic View, come back with such vividness? Suddenly she was seized with an overpowering desire to write. Not the beauty of the landscape, not the nameless productions of the soil, not the present, but the past made her pen fly swiftly. She felt as if impelled by a power from without, and described the first romance, with its sad little ending, which she experienced that summer at Atlantic View.

The years rolled back on either side and she saw clearly as a woman what she failed to understand as a child-like girl. As she wrote she found herself making Arthur Lindley one of the main figures and herself the other. The tall, impetuous young fellow, free, rich, handsome. He was courted by many, and admired by all. How, then, did it happen that he should have shown such eager delight in her society, flushing with pleasure when she appeared and attending her like her shadow? The young Ethel was led to believe in the singularity of the lad, when he told her frankly that there was no girl to be compared with her, not one. No one was so true, so honest, so unaffected. What a series of serapes the boy did get into, to be sure, and how he confided them all to her and asked her advice, for he had no mother and no sisters. "But I don't want you for my sister," he had said, with a twinkle in his blue eyes.

Those long mornings on the beach, when the bathers made merry and the lookers-on lined the sands, those afternoons of idle swinging in a hammock till the long shadows made a game of tennis a possibility; those soft evenings, when the cottages looked like fairy places and the land played dreamy music in the park; they all floated through the halls of memory.

Ethel Harcourt wrote spontaneously. She saw, with the perception of mature years, the tangled web in which her girlish feet were caught. She remembered the days when there crept into and between the comradeship an alien note. "How or when it began she could not tell, but her instinct warned her of the approaching danger. Arthur Lindley no longer came with his outbursts and confidences. He seemed to be watching her, to be weighing and comparing her words, holding her at a hostile distance. There was nothing which could have been told, no one word or sentence which separated them, only a growing atmosphere of distrust on one side, and maiden shyness and reserve on the other. At last there came an outbreak from him; bitter, unkind words and mysterious allusions. Ethel tried to have him explain himself, but it had no effect. She had treated him shabbily, she, who had been his best friend. No one could bear such things, and he would not bear them any longer. "There could be no explanation; no, he would not hear one word, but would bid her 'good morning.' After this they would meet as strangers."

Ethel was a girl who held her head very high, and she would not for a moment have young Lindley think that she missed his faithfulness. It was very easy to accept Mrs. Harcourt's view of the matter, and drift into intimate companionship with her nephew. Al Harcourt, a young man whom Ethel had always shrank from, but who was now a gift from fate. She saw now how easily she was entangled, how the appearances were against her, and how she lent herself to her own misery. For it was misery for a few days. She could bear her own bitterness and regret, but to see Arthur grow careless in dress, to hear him talk and laugh loudly, to be told of his frantic attentions to some of the leaders of the fast set, all these made her heart ache. And the season came to its end with a glitter of fireworks, and the crowds parted, each family to its own home. The Harcourts came to California the following winter and the little play was never finished.

All this, and more, went to make up the story. She touched it here and there with her artist fingers, and the pathetic little tale was written in words which went to the heart. At the end she stopped, pen in hand, and listened to the chatter of the gay-breasted blackbird which was perched on a pepper tree near.

This was life; not those feverish, far-off days, but this quiet growth and unfolding of her true nature. A widening of the sympathies, a deeper insight, a humbler estimate of her powers and a greater possibility of enjoyment.

It was morning in a hotel office in San Diego. The stout clerk was bending laboriously over the register, putting in a fancy heading at the top of a new page. The black porter and his aids were hurrying about, gathering up valises, wraps, koklaks and umbrellas, and trying to get off those unfortunate who were to leave on the early train. The few business men who boarded in the house came out from the breakfast room with a mild air of importance, as betrays the well worn surrounding by the sick. One by one the invalids, in all stages of lung and throat trouble, made their way across the great sun veranda. Most of them were attended by a member of the family, but a solitary man occasionally stalked or sauntered on his way toward breakfast. Two men, who happened to be sitting near each other, laid down their papers at the same moment, and the elder remarked:

"It's a fine day."

"Yes, very nice weather," assented the other.

"Seen here long?"

"Nearly two months."

"Don't get tired of it?"

"Yes, a little, sometimes."

"Board as good as this most of the time?"

"I think so."

"Nurse you're here for your health?"

"Yes, my lungs are weak. Excuse me, I see the mail is in," and the tall, bearded man walked slowly toward the desk.

"Here's your mail, Mr. Lindley," said the clerk, handing him several letters, a paper and a magazine. He retreated to a quiet corner in the office, glanced quickly through his letters, read the paper and took up the magazine. He became absorbed, he looked around for a moment to assure himself that he was not dreaming, and he read on again. Was he losing his senses? Surely, he knew that seaside resort, those tiny cottages and—what would come next? His own words, his foolish, pig-headed obstinacy! And how she, that proud little creature, understood it all. Could she ever forgive him? Was it too much to expect, too much to hope for? He laid it down with a long sigh and gave himself up to the memories of those sweet and better days. What a schemer that Al Harcourt was! He was ashamed to confess how easily he became a prey to the wily fellow—that is, he was ashamed a dozen years ago, but not now. Where could Ethel Harcourt be? Were they not in the state, the whole family? Would she forgive him if he found her? He would write to Pothergill and get the address of the author of "In Summer Days." What a waste of time in the years since they met!

"And to think that while I was writing it you were only twenty miles away," said Miss Harcourt, her quiet face lighted by a happy smile. "I was compelled to take a chapter from my own life just at that moment, and it would have been almost impossible either to have checked the impulse to write or to have altered my incidents in any way."

"Miss Harcourt—Ethel—I can never undo the past, those words, those unworthy suspicions, but if I may I will make amends for them in the future. May I try?"

Ethel Harcourt found it difficult to raise her eyes to meet the earnest gaze of her old friend. She felt the mounting color flush her usually pale cheeks, but as simply as a child she laid her hands in his. After a long conversation, more by guessing to themselves than to anyone else, Ethel said:

"You will promise me never to let coldness or doubt part us again. Come to me when my words or my actions cannot be explained, tell me frankly, instead of hearing it in silence."

"My darling," said Lindley, "I give you my solemn promise that it shall be as you have said. And in the coming years there shall fall no shadow between us, for between two who are truly made one there is no room for shadows."—Mary Peabody Sawyer, in Boston Budget.

A MEDICAL COLUMBUS.

The Discoverer of Alcohol and Antimony.

The year 1500 is not only the quadracentennial of the discovery of America, but also that of the birth of Paracelsus, the celebrated chemist and physician, although his methods were of such a character that in modern times we should call him a charlatan. It is said that Paracelsus was also one of the first discoverers of alcohol, which he called the "Elixir of Life," but demonstrated the fallacy of his theory by himself dying a sot. One of the most noted exploits of Paracelsus was in experimenting with various drugs, one of which acquired its name from the peculiar qualities which it exhibited. Having found a peculiar substance, he tested its medicinal virtues upon the monks of a neighboring monastery with the effect that each one of the persons who took the medicine promptly died. From this fact, he named the newly discovered drug "anti-monk," which in the Spanish language is "anti-monic," from which we have "antimony."—Good Health.

FOREIGN GOSSIP.

In parts of central Asia bricks are baked in cylindrical ovens about three days and then burned in an atmosphere of steam, which is produced by closing the heated ovens with covers of wet felt. The bricks are turned by the steam from red to dark gray, acquire great hardness and become sonorous. They are said to resist weathering better than fire-burnt bricks.

One of the most remarkable sights witnessed on the face of the globe is afforded by the subterranean lakes of Sinoia, in Zambesia, in Central Africa. Lionel Deele, the French explorer, has returned from there and reports that the water is of the deepest indigo dye, and that the azure grotto of Capri can in nowise compare with the beautiful color of these wonderful lakes.

Under the head, "Treasonable Little Wales," the Pall Mall Gazette reports that at a smoking concert at Aberystwyth university recently, "God Save the Queen" was shouted down by the students, who "prefer to sing some jargon of their own about leeks and freedom." But whatever the significance or sense in such a display, it is not of infrequent occurrence in democratic Great Britain.

The population of Ireland in 1891, according to revised returns recently issued, was 4,581,248. The natural increase of population, or excess of births over deaths, for the year was 22,117, and the loss by emigration was 59,022; 21,475 marriages were registered within the year, and it is significant of the religious feeling which exists in all parts of Ireland that only 300 were by civil contract in the registers offices.

The new London shower bouquet is like its long-time predecessor of the same name except in the matter of its facilities for holding. It is flat, with no stems of the flowers showing, and made with an opening at the back through which the hand is passed. In this way a much less protruding effect is obtained, while the graceful pendants trailing from the central cluster give the arrangement all its former beauty and effect.

Exploration is improving the popular knowledge of the Sahara. Instead of being largely below the sea, the greater part of it is from six to eight thousand feet above the level; instead of being rainless, showers make it bloom and cover it with green grass for a few weeks every year; large flocks and herds are maintained upon its borders; the oases are depressions where the water can be collected and stored and are villainously unhealthy in hot weather because of this stagnant water and the filthy habits of the inhabitants.

Thirty deaths from starvation occurred in London during 1891. For the most part they were of persons between forty and sixty-five years of age; there were several infants, and one woman of seventy-eight. In only two cases was death accelerated by drink. The relief authorities make "specific statements" that practically all the cases were unknown to them until too late to save life; the persons did not seek admission to the workhouse, or even outdoor relief, which seems to mean that practically all the thirty individuals who died of hunger were not of the pauper class, but honest poor, brought to destitution by the sad grail of untoward circumstances, and who starved and died in silence.

That Paris is favored as a medical center is evidenced in the statistics of last year, showing the Faculte de Paris to have had 9,315 students in attendance, as compared with 6,229 at Vienna and 5,527 at Berlin; and of those at Paris more than three-fifths were of foreign birth. The foreign student or practitioner going to Paris to supplement or complete his studies generally seeks some specialty, either of medicine, surgery, accouchement or some department of laboratory work. The whole resources of the Faculte de Paris, the hospitals and the numerous medical laboratories, and those of the Sorbonne, the museum and the college of France, are open to him free of any and all charges, even for material consumed.

Some Australians do not at all like the idea of a cable under the Pacific touching any other than British territory. The first link of a trans-Pacific cable designed to land in the United States is now under way in a line to connect New South Wales with New Caledonia, a French penal settlement to the eastward, and the governments of New South Wales and Queensland have contributed toward its cost. The Melbourne chamber of commerce met recently and "denounced the unpatriotic conduct" of these two sister colonies in making this contribution, and strongly urged other colonies to join in supporting the construction of a cable eastward touching only British territory, with land lines across British Columbia and Canada.

THE ROYAL TOMB IN HONOLULU.

Description of the Burial Place of the Kings of the Sandwich Islands.

The attention of all Americans is now drawn to the Sandwich Islands. The political possibilities which now exist of those fair daughters of the tropics, Oahu, Kauai and Molokai, becoming either the sisters or the wards of our states, have excited the interest and the curiosity of everyone, and every bit of information regarding these isles of the Pacific is eagerly read.

Among the many interesting things to be seen in Honolulu is the royal tomb. As the visit to be described occurred a certain number of years ago, it is possible that things may not be now as they were then, but it is not probable that anyone has violated the sanctity of the grave.

The royal tomb is situated immediately contiguous to the palace grounds. It is composed of a single chamber of fair size and height. Its walls are of massive coral, and a high and heavy wall of the same material surrounds the vault. Close around the coral inclosure is a grove of shade trees, and among them the gentle breezes that come in from the ocean seem to hymn a requiem for the departed.

monarchs. The entrance to this abode of defunct royalty is guarded by a keeper, who bears as a sign of his authority the ponderous key of the sacred repository. The bolt obeys his efforts and the heavy door swings back on its rusty hinges. A collection of enlazoned coffins at once meets your gaze. They are covered with purple satin and gold velvet of the same hue, and rest one above the other on frames of iron—the wood of the acaia. The grave of Kamehameha, the conqueror, remains a profound secret until this day. The dead, whose coffins in scrupulous order before us are those royal personages who have departed this life since 1825. It was then that the method employed by modern nations was adopted in the Sandwich Islands. Everything about the tomb suggests a profound regard for the inviolate sanctity of their individual repose.

Standing among their lifeless dust it was difficult to avoid feeling an inexpressible sadness, mingled with a sense of awe. There they lay, a few dusky monarchs, and some of their descendants. They had swayed the scepter of absolute despotism. Some of them had seen human blood flow from the mangled and quivering limbs of victims laid on the altars of their old gods. At that moment and amid such hellish orgies they little thought of or cared for the spot that was to mark their earthly oblivion. Some of them had gone on the long journey in the blackest gloom of paganism; others under the light of a divine revelation and the influence of Christianity.

The first royal dead interred in this tomb were Liholiho, or Kamehameha II., and his consort, Kamehameha, both of whom died while visiting England in 1824. Their remains were brought back to their native islands by an English frigate, under command of Lord Byron, a relative of the poet. By a curious coincidence, Kamehameha, while king, died, as will be remembered, in the United States, and his remains were conveyed to Hawaii by an American man-of-war—the Charleston. They probably now repose in the royal tomb.

The most conspicuous of the coffins was the one which contains the remains of the great and good Kaahumani, the favorite wife of the old conqueror. It was of immense proportions, for the queen was a woman immensely large. But her vast physical bulk was a good emblem of the imperious tone of her character when a pagan queen and of her noble deportment when converted to Christianity. Never was there a greater change produced in a human being. Never was a death scene more happy than her own. Her life after her conversion was such as would have brightened the records of Christian heroism. Her simple tomb gives one a clearer view of the end of all earthly power and glory than all the glorious monuments that mark the graves of the heroes of the old world.—N. Y. World.

AN ANCIENT GAME.

It was Played by the Chinese in the Sixth Century.

Among the great Chinese games which have continued popular with the inhabitants of the celestial empire for thousands of years is the game of "Wei-chi," which undoubtedly has for a long period of time more or less eclipsed numerous others. This game is considered by the Chinese much superior to their chess, which is but slightly different from ours, and is notably the special game of the literary class, while military men, as a rule, indulge in chess. Wei-chi possesses interesting features, and requires great skill in playing. It has for us the merit of absolute novelty, because it differs essentially from those with which we are familiar. Unlike chess or draughts, the men are never taken, but remain where they are played. The game is not a series of skillful evolutions, but a successive occupation of points which, joined together, give a final winning position. Though the game is on a very extensive scale—the board containing three hundred and sixty-one places, and the men employed being nearly two hundred a side—still it is very simple in principle, all the men having the same value and the same powers. To achieve the object of the game on such an extensive board requires great foresight and profound calculation. This object is to occupy as much space on the board as possible. He who at the end of the game commands most places has won. This can be carried out in two ways—by inclosing empty spaces on the board with a certain number of one's men, and by surrounding and capturing the enemy's men. This ancient game was first mentioned in Chinese writings about B. C. 635, and was probably derived from the Babylonian astronomers, who were about that period the teachers of the East. Chinese emperors have been exceedingly fond of the game, though it subjects them to the necessity of forgetting their rank, those who play with them having to sit in their presence. It is recorded of an emperor of the fourth century that on one occasion he made an irregular move. The courtier who was playing with him held the monarch's finger, and it is recorded, the emperor was not in the least offended. This incident was considered of sufficient importance to be solemnly recorded in history.—Chicago Journal.

Early Efforts at a Navy.

In January, 1813, an act was passed authorizing the building of four 74-gun ships and six first class frigates. A subsequent act authorized the construction of six sloops-of-war and as many ships on the lakes as the president might direct. Another act promised any person who, by torpedoes or other like contrivances, should burn, sink or destroy any British armed vessels, half their value in money. So much enthusiasm had been created by the naval victories in 1812, that in seven of the states acts were passed to build ships-of-war and present them to the government. The latter projects, however, failed.—Boston Budget.

AN ELEPHANT STORY.

How an Intelligent Pachyderm Utilized a Python in the Cyclone Belt.

They were swapping truthful tales at the hotel one evening, and by unanimous consent the man from Girard, Pa., was awarded the sugar-coated bun.

"I've read a good deal," said he, "about the intelligence of elephants, but there is an elephant out in Geneva, O., which is wintering with a circus there, that is the smartest and most intelligent elephant on earth."

"Once in awhile a cyclone sweeps over the Buckeye state that leaps buildings to the ground. The elephant, whose name is Snoozer, knows as much about meteorological conditions as the entire force of the weather bureau combined. Not long ago, as Snoozer cast his weather eye out of the window of the building in which the menagerie was confined, he discerned a marked change in the barometric condition of the atmosphere. He also saw a cyclone to the southeast headed dead on the menagerie building. Slipping his chain and grasping an ax in his trunk, he went out to the windward of the building and drove a guy stake deep in the ground. The cyclone was then but a mile off, and was rapidly nearing the building. Rushing inside, Snoozer unfastened the cage containing the giant python, and seizing the big snake in his trunk, trotted outside and tied his tail to the guy stake. Then rearing himself on his hind legs, he fastened the python's head around the center chimney of the building. The cyclone was now but a quarter of a mile away.

"Dashing around to the leeward of the building, the intelligent pachyderm braced his powerful legs in the ground and put his hands against the side of the building. The cyclone was now but a hundred yards off. The next instant it struck the menagerie with terrific force. The superior intelligence of the elephant was here most evident. If he had taken a chain and fastened it to the windward side of the building it would have been snapped like a thread, but the python was elastic and he stretched just enough to hold the building in place, together with the elephant's brace on the other side. The force of the cyclone was so great that it stretched the python ten feet and shoved Snoozer's legs down into the hard ground up to his body.

"When the cyclone passed over Snoozer trotted around, untied the python, replaced it in its cage, pulled up the guy stake with his trunk, returned the ax to its place, slipped the chain over his forefoot, and contentedly resumed his noonday meal of hay."

THE CAMEL'S REVENGE.

It Is Baited and the Camel Dies Out of Pure Disgust.

A very few years ago it chanced that a valuable camel, working in an old mill in Africa, was severely beaten by its driver, who, perceiving that the camel had treasured up the injury, and was only waiting a favorable opportunity for revenge, kept a strict watch upon the animal. Time passed away, the camel, perceiving that it was watched, was quiet and obedient, and the driver began to think that the beating was forgotten.

One night, after the lapse of several months, the man, who slept on a raised platform in the mill, whilst, as is customary, the camel was stalled in a corner, happening to remain awake, observed by the bright moonlight, that when all was quiet the animal looked cautiously around, rose softly, and stealing toward a spot where a bundle of clothing and a beros, thrown carelessly on the ground, resembled a sleeping figure, cast itself with violence upon them, rolling with all its weight, and tearing them most viciously with its teeth.

Satisfied that its revenge was complete, the camel was returning to its corner, when the driver sat up and spoke. At the sound of his voice, and perceiving the mistake it had made, the animal was so mortified at the failure and discovery of its scheme that it dashed its head against the wall and died on the spot.—Sheffield Telegraph.

Baited.

A very tall, sallow, raw-boned youth of about twenty years shot swiftly out of an Arkansas rural abode of slabs and sod and raced madly toward the thick timber across the road, when a little, snuff-dipping elderly woman in a gown made of about four and half yards of orange yellow and green "kaliker" came to the door, and shaking a hickory rod toward the retreating figure, called out:

"You'd better run, Jabe Spence, but I ain't goin' to run arter ye! But yer time 'o reck'nin' will come jist the same. You wait until you come home ter-night an' go to bed, an' if I don't yive you one larrupin' I ain't yer ma. I'll learn ye how to talk sassy to me an' say you'll git merried whensoever you please. Lawdy, boy, I didn't boin ye into the world ter hev ye up an' merry 'fore you've paid fer yer raisin'. You'll ketch it later on, see if you don't."—Detroit Free Press.

In the Spring

Many people are troubled with dizziness, dullness, unpleasant taste in the morning, and that "tired feeling." Pimples, boils and other manifestations of impure blood also appear, annoying and depressing. To all such sufferers we so respectfully urge a trial of Hood's Sarsaparilla. No preparation ever received such unanimous praise for its success as a Spring Medicine. It cures scrofula, salt rheum and every other evidence of impure blood. It overcomes that "tired feeling" and all other debility.

Mr. Geo. W. Twist
Coloma, Wis.

"A few years ago my health failed me, and I consulted several physicians. Not one could clearly diagnose my case and their medicines failed to give relief. After much persuasion I commenced to take Hood's Sarsaparilla. Have taken several bottles and am much improved. From an all run down condition I have been restored to good health. Formerly I weighed 135 pounds, now I balance the scales at 175 pounds. Hood's Sarsaparilla has been a great benefit to me, and I have recommended it to friends, who realize good results by its use." THE CENSUS OFFICE.

One of the Greatest Curiosity Shops in the Land.

Advantages of Officials Who Found That Census-Taking Is Not an Unpleasant Pleasure—Autographs of Great Men.

(Special Washington Letter.)

One of the greatest curiosity shops of the present and for the future is the census office. The amount of information gathered by the divers means of the eleventh census is not only valuable but in many senses curious and absurd. If the data in the various bureaus of the census office were accessible and if they were not official secrets so that they cannot be published, one might fill a whole library full of funny, valuable and pathetic facts.

One of the curious things, and, in fact, there are many curious things which are not funny, is a document from a prominent citizen of Indiana which states that the gentleman who made it out is the head of a family and that his business is prosperous. He says that his name is Benjamin Harrison, and the business upon which he was then engaged was fulfilling the duties of president of the United States; the residence in which he was located with his family in the city of Washington was not mortgaged, and that he had sufficient income to support himself and his family. All these statements and many others equally amusing are made upon a slip containing printed questions for distribution throughout the country by the collectors of the census statistics. President Harrison filled out his in due form in 1890 and it is now on file.

A gentleman who writes a very fine hand and signs himself Grover Cleveland says that he is an attorney at law and is doing a prosperous business which is sufficient to support himself and family, which, he says, consists only of himself and his wife; but from reliable information the country at large is well aware of the fact that the Cleveland family has been increased since that slip of paper was made out for the census agent; and that Mr. Cleveland is no longer engaged in practicing law.

There is another slip made out in autograph form stating that the individual is named Rutherford B. Hayes, that he resides in Ohio, and that his business is farming. He assured the census agent and the government that he was making a fair living for his family, and that his house is not mortgaged; and so forth. There are no other ex-presidents now living or we would have a number of their autograph statements.

There is another slip which is made out in the strong and bold handwriting of James G. Blaine, who states that his home is in Augusta, Me., but that the business in which he was then engaged required him to reside in Washington, where he was secretary of state for the United States government.

Thomas F. Bayard, of Delaware, announces that he is an attorney at law and is doing a prosperous business, sufficient to support his family. Mr. Bayard was secretary of state during the former Cleveland administration, and writes a very good hand, indeed, for a statesman of such prominence.

Melville W. Fuller states that his residence is in Washington, D. C., and that his business is chief justice of the supreme court, that his residence is not mortgaged and that he is making a good living for himself and for his family. Mr. Fuller is a very small man physically, but he writes as big a hand as Goliath, of Gath, could have written if he had known anything about penmanship.

L. Q. C. Lamar, who was secretary of the interior during the first Cleveland administration, and formerly one of the greatest senators from the south, filled out a census slip stating that he then resided in the city of Washington, and his business was that of associate justice of the United States supreme court. Mr. Lamar wrote a beautiful hand, indeed, and could readily have made a good living as a teacher of penmanship if his talents had not brought him into a larger and wider sphere of usefulness.

One distinguished United States senator, who has since that time declared himself "a statesman out of a job," stated that he was "a lawyer by profession and a senator by occupation." He writes a beautiful hand, and every line of it indicates strong character. It is very interesting, if you have access to the papers, and if you know where the distinguished men of the country reside, to turn to the different states and localities and find the slips made out by those gentlemen and learn what they say about themselves and their business. It is also interesting to note their chirography and study character in that manner, if you have a facility in that direction.

Another matter of considerable interest is the fact, which has been demonstrated by the census office, that women are superior clerks in government offices. Your correspondent has maintained that they make better clerks than men, as a general rule.

During the gathering of statistics, the separation and filing of facts in the main office in this city, over one thousand young women, most of them very pretty indeed, have been in the offices of the eleventh census. They have done excellent work and have earned their salaries as well as any male clerks could have done, excepting the more beautiful girls. Exceptional beauty is sometimes a fatal gift to a girl, and spoils or ruins very many of them. To be fair and comely is a goodly gift to every woman, but to be exceptionally beautiful is often a fateful misfortune.

A really beautiful woman cares little for her brain or its development, and the less education she has the happier she usually seems to be. Nearly all of the ladies who have been employed in the census office have been young and very fair looking indeed, but they have attended to their duties with remarkable fidelity and attention to every detail.

A very few young ladies in the office garishly tried to add to their beauty by the liberal use of cosmetics and other artifices. They, as clerks, have been worse than useless, and a demoralizing element in the office. Every chief of division has been glad when the day has come for their discharge; although the superintendent and chief clerk speak in the highest terms of lady clerks, as a rule.

The special agents who traveled over the country two and a half years ago making inquiries and obtaining information for the use of the census office, tell a great many interesting stories concerning their experiences. For example, one of those who were engaged in learning about the oyster industry tells a good story concerning his experience with a negro oysterman about ninety miles south of here on the Potomac. He said:

"How many oysters do you catch in a year?"

"Dunno, boss."

"Don't you know how many bushels?"

"No, boss."

"Well, what did you sell them for?"

"What they were worth, boss."

"But what were they worth?"

"Whatever I could get for them, boss."

"Come now, what did you get for them? Give me some idea."

"Hain't got no idea, boss."

"Well, what was paid you for them?"

"Enough to pay all my debts, boss."

"How much did you owe?"

"Owed everybody, boss."

That was all the agent was able to elicit from his subject, who is a fair specimen of an oysterman. To get the facts as to his case it was necessary to go around to everyone with whom he had dealt during the year and make an estimate.

A gentleman writing from New York said to the superintendent of the census: "If you hear anything adverse to my character from this vicinity you need not believe that it is so, as I am not an idiot or any other of those mean things that I have been called, can read and write and have good health. I do not mean to have my name and character injured, as I am agent for various articles.

"Please write and tell me if the census taker or anyone else in this neighborhood has made any nasty remarks about me."

"P. S.—Do not send this back, but keep it to refer to."

This letter is on file and will remain on file "to refer to" many years after the eccentric writer has, like imperial Caesar, turned to clay. But there are no letters in the office showing that any of his neighbors had written anything "adverse to his character."

"I certainly earned my salary today," wrote a census gatherer in Brooklyn. "It is true that I only return seventeen names, but in getting the information from Mrs. Foley I got a pair of black eyes and a badly sprained ankle. My eyes came into contact with Mrs. Foley's fist and my ankle was sprained as I rolled down the stairs. I will be on duty to-morrow, but will wear a green shade over my eyes and walk with a cane."

Manifestly Mrs. Foley, who so often she may be regarded the census taker as an insolent interloper who had no business to know about Mr. Foley, his business, his age, the age of his wife, and whether or not their house was mortgaged.

An agent writing from Rochester, N. Y., states: "The Anderson family, whose census is inclosed, keeps a yellow dog. I did not stop long enough to inquire his breed, for he had the bad breeding to take portions of my trousers and a few drops of my blood. I did not look back even to see what manner of dog he was in appearance. He had strong jaws and a sonorous voice, which is still resounding in my ears."

The young gentlemen who read this letter may take the hint and prepare themselves for unusual experiences in the year 1900 if they should apply for and secure positions as census agents at the close of the century.

LOCUSTS IN CHINA.

They Are Regarded as a Calamity from Heaven.

The Singular Methods Adopted by the Celestials for Exterminating the Pests.—A Queer Occupation for Soldiers.

The great province of Kiang-Soo, China, is being devastated by locusts. Consul Jones at Chin-Kiang sends the state department an account of the curious efforts made by the afflicted sections to dispel the scourge, says a Washington correspondent of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. Some of the methods resorted to are as striking as the suggestions offered to the Kansas people when they were suffering from a similar visitation some years ago. When the locusts make their appearance in one of these Chinese districts there is consternation among the unfortunate peasantry, who assemble in the fields with wild clamor and din of gongs, armed with long bamboos with streamers attached, and vainly endeavor to drive off the terrible invaders who are settling down in myriads and devouring their crops before their eyes. Every leaf and twig is covered thick, giving the appearance of some hideous yellow fruit or plant. A faint, sour smell, like that of fermenting vegetable matter, is always perceptible in the neighborhood. It comes, no doubt, from the droppings of the insects.

There is a curious and widespread belief among the Chinese in the existence of a "king" locust—"wang" he is called—of colossal size and quasi-supernatural character, who hovers invisibly in the upper regions of the air, directing and controlling the migrations of the different swarms. At some places the leading officials have publicly sacrificed and made offerings to the king of the locusts in order that he might be influenced to spare their localities.

"I know of few sights," writes the consul, "more extraordinary than a swarm engaged in pairing. The air is filled with clouds of locusts drifting, circling, crossing and recrossing, with a faint, whirling noise, and settling on the ground in thousands of couples. The ground is carpeted thickly with them; you cannot take a step without crunching heaps of them under your feet, while thousands more start up in pattering volleys against your legs, hands and face."

The eggs are deposited in holes drilled by the female an inch or more deep in the ground. The time required for hatching depends entirely on the temperature. In very hot weather the new brood begins to make its appearance at the end of a week. At this stage they are very small, black, and as active as fleas, making extraordinary bounds by means of their muscular hind legs. At a little distance they suggest the idea of a swarm of black ants seized with sudden insanity. In shape they are exact copies of their parents, save for the want of wings. They are greedy feeders and grow rapidly. By the eighth or ninth day wings have budded and the color begins to change, yellow spots appearing, and in about a month they are full grown.

The destruction, by suitable measures, of this formidable pest, involving, as it does, the prevention of famines, fever epidemics and riots, is a matter of grave public concern. One constantly hears of mandarins losing their buttons and being disgraced as the penalty of remissness or failure to destroy the enemy.

Consul Jones says the Chinese consider that the visitation of the locusts is a "calamity from Heaven," and that there is no help for it. Chinese records chronicle many instances of the appearance and the calamities inflicted by locusts in former times, but they have no peculiarly effective methods of destroying them. The government usually issues proclamations ordering out the soldiers and encouraging the farmers to destroy them. The latter are given a bounty for their destruction.

The soldiers, with their officers at their head, are used against the locusts as against an adverse army in the field. Instead of a gun or a lance, however, each soldier is armed with a coarse hempen bag attached to a bamboo pole, which, with wide-open mouth, is waved back and forth among the swarms until filled, when they are killed and the action renewed.

Housekeepers Should Remember.

The Government Chemists, after having analyzed all the principal brands of baking powder in the market, in their reports placed the "Royal" at the head of the list for strength, purity and wholesomeness; and thousands of tests all over the country have further demonstrated the fact that its qualities are, in every respect, unrivaled.

Avoid all baking powders sold with a gift or prize, or at a lower price than the Royal, as they invariably contain alum, lime or sulphuric acid, and render the food unwholesome.

THE OHIO CHEMICAL CO.:
DEAR SIR:—I have been using your cure for tobacco habit, and found it would do what you claim for it. I used ten cents worth of the strongest chewing tobacco a day, and from one to five cigars; or I would smoke from ten to forty pipes of tobacco. Have chewed and smoked for twenty-five years, and two packages of your Tablets cured me so I have no desire for it.

PITTSBURGH, PA.
THE OHIO CHEMICAL CO.—GENTLEMEN:—It gives me pleasure to speak a word of praise for your Tablets. My son was strongly addicted to the use of liquor, and through a friend, I was led to try your Tablets. He was a heavy and constant drinker, but after using your Tablets but three days he quit drinking, and will not touch liquor of any kind. I have waited four months before writing you, in order to know the cure was permanent. Yours truly,
MRS. HELEN MORRISON.

The promptness and certainty of its cures have made Chamberlain's Cough Remedy famous. It is intended especially for coughs, colds, croup and whooping coughs, and is the most effectual remedy known for these diseases. Mr. C. D. Muhn, of Union City, Pa., says: "I have a great deal to say for Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I warrant every bottle and have never heard of one failing to give entire satisfaction." 50 cent bottles for sale at J. V. Potter & Co. Drug Store.

While Mr. T. J. Richey, of Altona, Mo., was traveling in Kansas he was taken violently ill with cholera morbus. He called at a drug store to get some medicine and the druggist recommended Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy so highly he concluded to try it. The result was immediate relief, and a few doses cured him completely. It is made for bowel complaint and nothing else. It never fails. For sale by J. V. Potter & Co. Drug Store.
